Addressing Membership Retention

We have recently been inundated with announcements regarding significant new construction projects across the country. In the auto industry, Ford, General Motors and Toyota have all announced new battery plants and manufacturing facilities totaling in the billions of dollars. Intel announced a new semiconductor chip facility in Columbus, OH, estimated to be a $20 billion project over 15 years. These projects will provide excellent work opportunities for our members and signatory contractors.

On top of this news, last November Congress finally succeeded in passing the Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act. This once in a generation legislation upgrading our country's infrastructure will create good-paying union construction jobs. Additionally, on August 4 President Biden signed into law the CHIPS and Science Act investing $53 billion to promote domestic semiconductor manufacturing, meaning new chip plants will be built in America. This bill contains Davis-Bacon (prevailing wage) protections and registered apprentice requirements on the projects. This ensures a level playing field for our signatory contractors.

Just two weeks later, on August 16, the President signed the Inflation Reduction Act which includes $5 billion promoting green construction, again creating additional opportunities in the construction industry and again with Davis-Bacon and registered apprenticeship provisions.

All said, the future looks very bright in terms of employment for our membership and potential growth of our union. Contractor requests for manpower are at an all-time high, despite material shortages. We are dedicating vast resources to membership recruitment. It is an extraordinary time in terms of employment opportunities for young people—it is a worker's market. This unfortunately makes the competition to recruit new members into the roofing and waterproofing industry extremely challenging, time consuming and expensive. Every newly recruited member represents a significant value to our organization.

With that said, it is very disconcerting that our overall membership numbers remain stagnant. While new membership applications continue to roll in, we see membership totals fall congruently. We must be able to retain the young men and women who join our union.

The roofing and waterproofing industry is difficult by nature. It is demanding work paired with exposure to the elements. We are affected by weather conditions which diminish work hours and create inconsistent weekly income. In addition, our new members are not always accepted and treated well on the job. This has been a source of contention and turnover for years.

We cannot change the tough nature of our industry, nor the weather; however, we can change the way new members are treated. Encouraging rather than discouraging new members will go a long way in how they perceive their job. Mentoring new applicants will help them advance their skill set on the job and be more productive crew members. The days of hazing and taunting new initiates should be in the past. Every member, every local union and every signatory contractor should be a part of the solution, not the problem. Each of these entities should evaluate retention rates and develop procedures to address the issue.

To increase our market share and protect our union from other trades encroaching on our work, we must provide a capable workforce to our employers. Recruiting a younger workforce to replace retiring members is vital to ensuring your pension and health and welfare funds remain healthy during your retirement years.

This is no easy task in a competitive worker's market, but progress can be as simple as encouraging and embracing our new members. We cannot ignore this issue, and I plan on investing the resources to enhance retention rates.

International Kicks Off New Leadership Training Program

In conjunction with this year's National Instructor Training Program, the International held its first annual Leadership Training Program for local union officers and representatives. The training was held at Washtenaw Community College in Ann Arbor, MI, the week of June 12 – 17.

The Leadership Training Program (LTP) was developed to assist local union leaders with the demands of managing their locals effectively. The knowledge needed is diverse and substantial, covering areas such as contract negotiations, labor law, grievance handling, local union financial reporting requirements, organizing and marketing, and management skills. The LTP offers education in several of these areas in a classroom setting that encourages participation and collaboration among peers.

Classes offered in this inaugural program included:

- Labor Law in the Construction Industry
- Basic Computer Skills
- Cash Receipts Record (CRR) Training
- Business Communications
- Principles of Management

This year 51 union leaders—representing 38 local unions—completed the program. The program is expected to grow as more locals participate, and attendees are encouraged to return annually to discover new courses, as well as more-advanced core courses.

Roofers International President James Hadel praised the program for strengthening the union overall by uplifting leadership at the critical local level. He expressed gratitude to everyone who took time out to attend and complete the courses. The program, he said, will enhance business managers’ capabilities to become more effective and more proficient leaders: “It is an investment in your future, as well as our union.” ■

International President Emeritus

JOHN C. MARTINI

After a distinguished career spanning 64 years in the roofing industry, International President Emeritus John C. Martini passed away at his home in Chicago, IL, on September 2, 2022, at the age of 83.

Brother Martini was a proud member of our union from October 25, 1957, until his death. His career in roofing started after a short stint as a carpenter, where his boss did not support him joining the union.

He began what would be a 20-year roofing career at Boice Roofing in LaGrange, IL, and he joined Roofers & Waterproofers Local 11, Chicago, IL. He served as trustee and business agent for Local 11 before being asked by International President Earl Kruse to serve as International Representative for the Midwest region in 1979.

In 1993, Martini was asked to serve as International Vice President and was then appointed Director of Organizing, which involved overseeing all organizing efforts in the United States. When Kruse announced he would retire in 2003, the Roofers International Executive Board elected Martini International President. He was then elected International President at the 2003 Convention.

He built his presidency around the tenets of organizing, labor-management cooperation, and safety—and ensuring roofers received their due recognition. “Roofing is the hardest-working trade of all the construction trades, yet roofing workers don’t get the recognition and respect they deserve,” he said. “I want to do all I can to see that our members get treated as equals on job sites.”

Organizing and protecting workers was so central to Martini’s vision that he dedicated vast resources to organizing the previously unorganized workers of the southwest, mainly in the Las Vegas and Phoenix areas.

He felt strongly that the region’s major residential contractors had been cheating their employees out of wages and overtime, taking advantage of workers’ non-documented or non-English-speaking status. Today, the International Union presents an award in his namesake to local unions that demonstrate excellence in organizing—the John C. Martini Organizing Award is given to locals that achieve record membership.

Brother Martini served three years as president before retiring after 49 years of service, in order to return to his native Chicago to spend more time with his wife and family. He was the beloved husband of Lenore; loving father of Michael Martini, Sharon Snow, Sandra Cotton and John Martini; and proud grandfather of 12 and great grandfather of five.

For those who had the privilege and honor of working with or personally knowing John Martini, there will be a tremendous loss in their personal and professional lives. Reflecting on John’s enduring spirit, International President James Hadel remarked that “As International President, John was a strong advocate of organizing Roofers and Waterproofers. Rarely a day would go by that he didn’t reference the importance of membership growth. If we truly want to pay our respects to a great leader, then we should all make the effort to organize. Now is the time!” ■

A Guide to Symbols

Danger!

Not following warning labels can be hazardous to your health and the health of those around you.

Products containing hazardous chemicals can cause severe injuries or make you sick.

They can also kill you.

Warning labels are worthless if you don't read or understand them.

OSHA has adopted a standardized system of labeling to help you identify hazards.

Make sure you know what to look for and what the symbols mean.

Your employer is required to...

- ▶ Train you about the Hazard Communication Standard and chemical hazards you will be exposed to on the job.
- ▶ Give you access to Safety Data Sheets for hazardous products on your worksite.
- ▶ Have a written hazard communication program.
- ▶ Protect you from exposure to hazardous products, even those used by other employers on your worksite.

Why should you care about this?

- ▶ Thousands of workers die each year from work-related exposure to chemicals.*

Secretary-Treasurer's Letter

BY MITCH L. TERHAAR, INTERNATIONAL SECRETARY-TREASURER

Why Your Vote Always Counts!

Brothers and Sisters,
It's always a relief when government leadership values the importance of labor unions. Our current administration, being pro-union, has already signed, by executive order, mandates and protections for our Union Roofers and the workers who push this nation forward by the rebuilding of this country.

With the American Rescue Plan, we saw this administration provide the necessary financial relief that promoted the safe reopening of businesses and services, creating more jobs and opportunities for workers to provide for their families and communities. The Paycheck Protection Program was extended to non-profit labor unions, giving assurance and mobility for the fight we never stopped, even when the world did.

As union members of this nation, we have a right, and a clear responsibility, to keep the right people in office and vote out the wrong.

In the $1.2 trillion Infrastructure Act passed in August of 2021, labor unions, like ours, were given a voice at the table for fund allocation and proper protection granted to the union worker. With many projects approved and budgeted, never before has such an apparent alliance with protective organizations and union leadership been seen, and we are grateful to represent our membership at the highest levels of conversation in our government.

Since this administration came to power, many other provisions and mandates have been passed in favor of labor unions and our missions. One example is the PLA Executive Order signed by President Biden, which corrected many of the coordination challenges with large projects, lifting quality standards for federal project bidding, standardized rules, compensation costs, and dispute settlements in construction projects. Others range from the Special Financial Assistance Program of July 2022, and the CHIPS and Science Act of August 2022, which creates jobs and strengthens supply chains throughout the nation.

Through these and many other examples, the Biden-Harris Administration has proven that there is power in electing leaders who value unions and our members. As our country continues to move into what is now considered a post-pandemic society, the need for assurance and protection for the union worker is paramount.

Since joining the office, they've not only passed laws and signed orders to protect unions, but also appointed officials to continue that fight in high places. Officials like Secretary of Labor Marty Walsh, who tweeted the following after being appointed by President Biden:

"Working people, labor unions, and those fighting every day for their shot at the middle class are the backbone of our economy and of this country. As Secretary of Labor, I'll work just as hard for you as you do for your families and livelihoods. You have my word."

Due to this administration's efforts, we've also seen increased pro-labor changes to the National Labor Relations Board. The value of having the right people in the right place is worth its weight in gold. These board members are amending laws that protect the rights of union members again. The need to protect these changes and this pro-union administration is now.

And that's where we come in. As union members of this nation, we have a right, and a clear responsibility, to keep the right people in office and vote out the wrong. As we hit the polls this year in our upcoming elections, remember the importance of our elected officials. In the words of George Jean Nathan, "Bad officials are elected by good citizens who don't vote."

So, as we wind down the year 2022, remember your priority as a Union Roofer. Use your right to vote and protect your ability to succeed in this society. Our country owes so much to the Union Worker, so let's elect the right people who feel the same and keep this pro-union movement moving forward.

Vote November 8, 2022! ■

Project Labor Agreements For the Win

Project labor agreement, or PLA, is a term we use quite often, but we may not even realize when we are in fact working under a PLA.

PLAs are very different from prevailing wage requirements. Prevailing wage laws protect communities and workers from unscrupulous contractors low-balling bids on taxpayer-funded construction projects by setting wage rates to the local, or prevailing, standard. PLAs, on the other hand, are signed agreements between owners, contractors and building trades unions, most often signed by the local union but occasionally signed by your International. They can be signed by both public and private owners. For public projects, a PLA can protect taxpayers by eliminating costly delays due to labor conflicts or shortages of skilled workers.

PLAs have been used for generations. One of the first PLAs ever signed was the Hoover Dam in 1930. Since then many have been signed for construction projects including Walt Disney properties, NASA, every NFL stadium, and countless schools and other entities.

The agreements govern terms and conditions of employment for all craft workers—union and non-union—on a construction project. Yes, non-union contractors can and do sign PLAs. This is often used prior to obtaining a fully executed agreement with a contractor, or in some cases we may not have a union contractor interested in bidding a certain project. When this happens, a PLA is a great tool to use—it requires the non-union contractor to pay your wage and benefit package to their employees, and they must also contribute to your local JATC fund, pension and any other local fund requirements.

One huge advantage to the contractor and owner is that most PLAs have language that protects them from work stoppages; for us, it requires that they agree to no lock-outs for the length of the project. Working conditions and grievance procedures are typically followed as outlined in our collective bargaining agreements.

One of the offshoots of PLAs is the community workforce agreement (CWA). These agreements commonly call for a certain percentage of apprentice utilization and include requirements for local hiring of minority and women workers. Often included in a PLA is language that includes our Helmets to Hardhats program, which gives military veterans a direct path to our apprentice programs.

Currently we have a pro-union president in the White House. Joe Biden has been the most union-friendly president in the last 50 years. Last year he worked with the Senate and House to get the Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act passed, a $1.2 trillion commitment to rebuilding and building new infrastructure. This bill is projected to create 1.5 million construction jobs per year for the next 10 years. Much of that work will be done under some form of PLA. On February 4 he signed into law the executive order for PLAs on all federal construction projects over $35 million. This laid the groundwork for work on federally owned facilities to be done under PLAs.

He worked again to get the CHIPS and Science Act signed into law in August, opening the door to build plants here in the USA. Intel will be building a massive plant near Columbus, OH, and yes you guessed it, it will be done under a National Construction Agreement, another form of PLA. He believes, just as we do, that the American worker should be united and represented to receive the best possible wages, benefits and working conditions deserved for the work we do.

The next time you are working on a major project, there is a good chance it is a PLA project that was negotiated for you, by your local or national building trades. Ford, GM, Intel, the federal government, local governments and more are building their new facilities under PLAs. Keep on the lookout because PLAs are happening everywhere, and that's a good thing for all workers. ■

Currently we have a pro-union president in the White House.

Marketing Issues

BY JEFF EPPENSTEIN, DIRECTOR OF MARKET DEVELOPMENT

Recruiting and Retaining the Next Generation of Union Construction Workers

Labor shortages are one of the major issues the construction industry is struggling to overcome. Right now, the biggest challenge for many roofing contractors is keeping their workforce fully staffed with employees wanting to work all the hours available. The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that in March 2022, there were 396,000 job openings in the construction industry, up from 383,000 in January and February.

A recent survey by the Associated General Contractors of America shows that construction companies are struggling to fill both craft to fill all the open positions. In addition, since skilled workers are not going to just start falling from the sky, employers and labor unions are going to have to change their approach to attract and train the next generation of workers.

The labor shortage needs to be addressed head-on; it is not something that will self-correct over time. If anything, the situation will only get worse as more workers age out and retire with fewer younger workers coming in to take their place. For labor organizations to recruit and retain workers, they may need to completely alter their methods.

YouthBuild USA are great ways to get your local union involved in attracting young kids to construction. If there is not a program in your area, consider starting one or sponsoring some other sort of program that promotes careers in construction. Helmets to Hardhats is another great resource to find good quality construction workers.

Do not forget your local community colleges and universities. Be sure to attend career days or job fairs in order to recruit local talent. Offering apprenticeships and internships are good ways to promote your local and find future workers. You can even work with your local community colleges to create additional apprenticeship programs.

The labor shortage needs to be addressed head-on; it is not something that will self-correct over time.

worker and salaried positions within their firms. While 74% of firms surveyed expect to add headcount over the next 12 months, a large majority are finding it difficult to fill open positions. Nearly 90% of firms looking to hire skilled craft workers are really struggling to fill those positions. Pipefitters and bricklayers topped the list of being the most difficult positions to fill.

The biggest issue we are having is finding qualified workers. There are just not enough skilled workers

Reach Out Locally

People entering the workforce these days are not exactly flocking to the construction industry. If you want to generate interest, you need to start reaching out to kids at the junior high and high school levels to introduce them to the construction industry. Offering summer jobs or apprenticeships to high school students can spark an early interest in a career in construction.

National programs like ACE Mentor Programs of America and

Competitive Pay & Benefits

Are your local contracts offering competitive pay and benefits to potential new members? What kind of benefits are you offering your members? Do you have a culture that is inviting and nurturing to the diverse backgrounds of the people you are recruiting?

Family leave, paid vacation, health and wellness programs, retirement benefits, medical insurance, and flexible schedules are all becoming standard benefits offered by most companies these days. Competition for workers is stiff, so you need to make sure that you are offering more than just a paycheck to your members if you want them to stick around and build a career with your local.

Highlight Your Safety Culture

Safety should already be your local's top priority. If your local has a strong safety culture or a rock-solid safety record, you can use that to recruit workers. Adopting a strong safety culture allows you to promote your commitment to protecting workers. It also shows you value and care about your members' well-being and will help you retain workers.

Offer Career Paths

Does your local offer career paths and advancement opportunities to all employees? Workers want to know that they can move up the ladder as they gain more experience and seniority. Work with members to determine what their career goals are and how you can help achieve them.

Help identify any additional education, training, or experience they may need, and outline a timeline and milestones to hit in order to achieve their career goals. As you map out a career path with each member, determine what resources your local can contribute to their success. This could cover providing apprenticeship training or journeyman/foreman upgrade training.

Offering career pathways is a great way to retain workers and ensure they will stay with your local, but it can also be a strong recruitment tool that shows your commitment to your members by promoting from within.

Provide the Best Industry Training

Providing ongoing training is a benefit that can be reaped by both local members and the company. Offering training opportunities to your members shows you have a vested interest in their professional growth. Retain workers by providing ongoing training that helps them achieve their career goals.

Continuous learning will help you keep your workers engaged and interested. Cross-training is a great way to teach employees different aspects of the business, and it also ensures that you have workers trained to handle multiple tasks when labor is short.

Differentiate Yourself and Never Stop Recruiting

What sets your local apart from other labor organizations? If your local uses a lot of technology like websites, social media and mobile apps, you can use that as a tool to recruit newer tech-savvy workers. Great pay and benefits, career advancement opportunities and safety are all assets you can use to set yourself above the competition to recruit and retain workers.

If labor shortages is a challenge your local is facing, you need to spend more time and resources in your recruitment efforts. Consider getting outside help from the Marketing Department or a recruitment agency that specializes in the construction industry. Always be on the lookout for ways to diversify and bring in new workers to your local.

Do not just focus on your needs for your next project or the next few months. Determine what your labor needs might be for the next 5, 10, or 20 years to ensure you are laying the groundwork now to create a strong network and pipeline of workers to carry your union into the future.

Offering career pathways is a great way to retain workers, but it can also be a strong recruitment tool that shows your commitment to your members by promoting from within. ■

Second Annual National Instructor Training Program

The Roofers & Waterproofers 2022 National Instructor Training Program (NITP) at Washtenaw Community College in Ann Arbor, MI, June 11–17, 2022, was a big success and will continue to grow and become more successful each and every year. This was the second year for the National Instructor Training Program, and participation was outstanding, drawing instructors from 43 apprenticeship programs.

The need for skilled roofers and waterproofers will only increase with time. If we intend to compete and increase our work opportunities, we must provide our members with the most advanced training available, which begins with the training and information provided to our local union JATC instructors.

The Research and Education Trust Fund has traditionally provided regional instructor training sessions, and now with the NITP we have the capabilities to provide an annual, nationally accredited instructor training program at one central location bringing all instructors together from around the country.

Instructors attend two college-credited courses per year, with each one consisting of 22.5 hours. For the first five years, one of the two courses (professional instructor courses) will be a requirement, which then allows each instructor to pick one trade-specific elective.

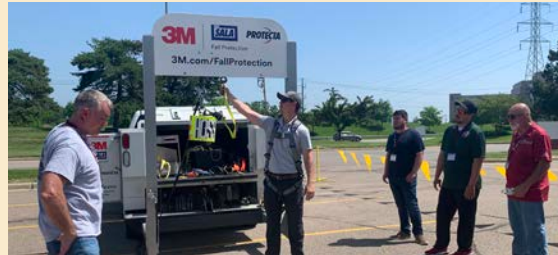

Instructors from the Roofers & Waterproofers Research and Education Trust Fund lead several courses at the NITP.

National Roofers Union and Employers Joint Health and Welfare Fund Offers HRA Benefits to Participants

You have to admit it. The National Roofers’ Health Fund HRA is a great benefit!

Realizing that no two participants are alike, the Board of Trustees of the National Roofers Union and Employers Joint Health and Welfare Fund added a Health Reimbursement Arrangement (HRA) to your suite of benefits in order to give you flexibility to use the Plan in on for a quick recap of how the HRA works.

Yes, an HRA account has already been set up for you...

If you are an active employee (or a qualified beneficiary), an HRA account was established in your name if you were eligible on January 1, 2022. At that time, we added a

The one-time $1,200 contribution made January 1, 2022, is intended to help you understand the value of an HRA and help you manage your medical, dental, and vision expenses during a year when they may be increasing.

You can use the funds in the HRA account as reimbursement for qualified healthcare expenses...

The HRA is designed to provide reimbursement for certain healthcare expenses on a tax-free basis. So, you can use the funds in your HRA account as reimbursement for qualified healthcare expenses that you, your spouse, and your eligible dependents incur. Such expenses include, but are not limited to deductibles, copays, coinsurance, premiums for COBRA, prescription drugs, and certain medical, dental, and vision care services and supplies.

Example: Jack’s daughter needed new eyeglasses and the frames that “My employees requested adding an HRA when we negotiated with Local 182 to offer the National Roofers Union and Employers Joint Health and Welfare benefits. Since then we have contributed over $1 million to the HRA on their behalf. Many have used the HRA and reimbursed themselves almost $400,000 for medical and dental expenses and they still have over $600,000 built up in their account to reimburse themselves for future expenses.”

— Lynn Price, Management Trustee, Dryspace Inc.

a way that best meets your—and your family’s—needs. We think that it’s a great benefit to have. It’s an excellent way for you to save on your healthcare expenses throughout the year.

Generally, only active employees whose local union has negotiated a contribution to the HRA have access to an employer-provided HRA account. However, earlier this year, we contributed $1,200 into individual HRA accounts for every active employee working under a collective bargaining agreement requiring employer contributions to the National Roofers Health Fund. And let’s be clear, we did this for everyone, not just those individuals whose local unions already participated in the HRA plan. Read

$1,200 HRA credit to your account. If your local union negotiated a contribution to the HRA plan under its collective bargaining agreement, your employer was making contributions to your account as well.

Although each participating local union has the option to participate in the HRA plan, not all of them do at this time. Check with your local union to see if you qualify.

You don’t need to contribute any money...

It will be up to your local union and employer to negotiate the allotment of future contributions into your account. The HRA account is typically funded exclusively through negotiated contributions.

his daughter wanted cost $160. The Plan only covered a portion of that cost, but Jack was able to use some of the funds in his HRA account as reimbursement for the amount the Plan did not cover, which qualified as an eligible expense. [Note: In order for an expense to be eligible for reimbursement from your HRA account, it must qualify as medical care under Internal Revenue Code Section 213(d).]

non-reimbursable healthcare expenses you and your eligible dependents incur while you are an active employee or you can save to use the funds in his HRA account as reimbursement for any qualified healthcare expenses he incurs. After several years of employer contributions, thousands of dollars will accumulate in Tom's HRA account. When Tom retires, he can use the funds in his HRA account to offset his Medicare expenses. Once the funds in the account are exhausted, the account will be closed.

"My husband has had contributions to his HRA account for many years. The money is there for the employees to use, and we take full advantage of that. The money can be used to pay medical or dental bills, cover an unexpected prescription drug expense, etc. It requires very little paperwork, and the entire process is very easy. I really can't say enough good things about this! The money is yours....use it! The money we saved went towards our vacation."

Watch as your unused funds remain yours and roll over for future use...

Another great feature of the HRA is that you determine how you want to use the money in your HRA account. The choice is yours. For example, you can use the funds in your HRA account to pay for up and use the funds in the future, even after you retire. After the end of any given calendar year, unused money in your HRA account will roll over into the next year, allowing you to have funds for future use.

Example: Tom does not have significant unexpected medical, dental, or vision expenses, so he elects not

Scabby lies in repose, ironically at the funeral home where he was killed.

Scabby the Rat Murdered in Springfield

Protesters from Roofers Local 112, Springfield, IL, were rallying outside Staab Funeral Home on July 25 when a woman stabbed the local's large inflatable rat. The Roofers were protesting Staab hiring a non-union roofing company. A woman was arrested on a charge of criminal damage to property. The inflatable is reportedly valued at $5,000.

Members mourned the loss of their ally, Scabby, who was a longtime fixture at the local's demonstrations. A fake news source published an obituary commemorating Scabby's short life:

Scabby T. Rat, 8, of Springfield, died Monday, July 25, 2022, at Springfield 5th Street. Scabby loved to sit still on the sides of streets during the day and spent many a night at the nearby McDonald's dumpster. His favorite pastime was on Facebook, reading 217 Problems (a page in Central Illinois highlighting the annoyances the 217 brings residents). He was a proud union worker for the past four years. Scabby is survived by his wife, Minnie; sons, Mighty and Mickey; and his loving dog, CheezIt.

A memorial gathering was held August 5 at Staab Funeral Home, followed by a procession to the McDonald's dumpster. Honors were conducted on August 6 at Oak Ridge Cemetery, where Roofers Local 112 members were encouraged to attend in a show of solidarity at their fallen honorary union roofer's gravesite. ■

Report of International Representative Gabriel Perea

I begin my report at Local 162 in Las Vegas. Things are doing well since coming out of trusteeship. New Business Manager Jesus Loya is doing a good job adjusting to his new position. I have spent a lot of time working with him to make improvements to the apprenticeship program. We are shorthanded and actively looking to hire the right person to fill the apprenticeship coordinator position. The apprenticeship committee, both labor and management, has been working together and actively participating in making improvements to the program. We are trying to get all apprentices updated with OSHA 10 and 30 classes.

In order to organize new members, we have been talking with non-union roofers and anybody who wants to be in our apprenticeship program. Our signatory contractors are all looking for qualified roofers and waterproofers. Good roofers are in high demand at just about every local I talk with.

I have also kept in touch with Paul Colmenero from Local 45 in San Diego. The local is doing very well. They renegotiated their agreement. The membership ratified the three-year agreement with a large increase over three years. Paul continues to meet with non-union roofing contractors to try to organize them in the San Diego area. I have also met with one of our union companies in Southern California who is looking to open another union shop in Arizona.

Throughout the western locals the work seems to be picking up; however, the weather and materials supplies are not making things easy to work full weeks. We are trying to find quality roofers and waterproofers to supply our signatory contractors. We are stepping up our recruitment efforts in the Vegas area and throughout California.

Local 27 in Fresno Ca. is also doing a good job protecting our work. Business Manager Thomas Geiger is currently fighting issues with the State of California regarding our scope of work for air and moisture barriers. There are some issues with our waterproofing work as well. I would like to see the locals review their areas' scope of work to make sure the state has your work listed. Local 27 is due to get another increase in January.

Frank Mora and Thomas Geiger are both meeting with non-union contractors in efforts to increase employment opportunities for the membership. They have focused on changes to the apprenticeship training by moving to block training. They know the best way to organize new union companies is to have quality trained workers to supply our union contractor.

In closing, I would like to thank the three training centers in California for their help in Las Vegas. I appreciate all the support you have given the local apprenticeship program in Las Vegas. Dan Smith from the Bay Area, Lupe Corral from Southern California and Thomas Geiger from the Central Valley in Fresno—thank you. ■

I then worked with Local 20, Kansas City, MO, Business Manager Steve Gercone. We talked about the recent local elections and the open organizing position at the local. Next I went to Local 97, Champaign, IL, to meet with Business Manager Darrell Harrison. We reviewed issues that arose from the recent audit on the JATC fund and the building that was inherited when Local 92 was merged into Local 97.
